Hangar Inspections – While we have already inspected over 370 hangars so far this year, there are still a number of County-owned hangars we have yet to be able to inspect. We have recently sent out formal notices in the mail to those individuals who have yet to make their hangar available for inspection, so please give us a call and schedule your yearly inspection so we can get it done. Hangar inspections are quick and only take a few minutes. For anyone we sent a formal inspection to, if we do not hear back from you, we will be left with no choice but to cut your lock and conduct the inspection without you present, so please give us a call and schedule your inspection.

American Heroes Air Show – Whiteman Airport participated in the American Heroes Air Show at Hansen Dam on November 9th. Ernie Umana and Ruth Logan were there to answer questions about the Airport and its different businesses and organizations. Our Civil Air Patrol chapter was there with the cadets as well. WHP was well represented at this event.

Whiteman Airport Association Holiday Party – This year's Holiday Party will be held on December 12, 2019 at 6:30 in the old Administration building restaurant space. Contact the Airport Association for more information, EAA Young Eagles Flights – There are only 2 more dates for the Young Eagles Flights for 2019, November 23 and December 28. This is a great opportunity for kids to be introduced to aviation. Flights are free but registration is required. For more information go to www.eaachapter40.com.

Reporting of Airport Irregularities – We ask for your assistance anytime you see something at the airport that needs attention. A quick call to the office or to the operations duty phone or even an email is fine. You can email Ernie at eumana@americanairports.net or myself at swardle@americanairports.net. Your assistance is always appreciated here at Whiteman Airport!

FAA Acts to Preserve ADS-B Data Privacy

By Marc Cook | November 5, 2019 | www.avweb.com

A side effect of the FAA's move toward mandatory ADS-B position reporting next year is the ability for anyone to see a given aircraft's position and identification, which raises privacy concern for pilots and aircraft owners. Now the FAA will make it possible for owners to opt out of broadcasting ADS-B data in a way that directly reveals the aircraft's identity.

The first stage of what the FAA calls the Privacy ICAO Address (PIA) Program will be implemented for the start of the mandatory ADS-B Out equipage on Jan. 1, 2020. According to the FAA, it will set up a web portal where operators can request that their aircraft's ICAO address and position not be publicly visible. Also, according to the National Business Aviation Association, the FAA said it would "establish new data-sharing limits for air traffic tracking service providers if operators want to opt out of having their flight information broadcast over the internet. Those limits are expected to go in effect by year-end."

The second phase of the PIA process will be to move it to a third-party service provider sometime mid-year 2020. And with that will come improved opportunities to apply for a new "pseudo" identification separate from the aircraft registration. During the FAA's management of the program, operators can change no more often than every 60 days, but once transitioned to third-party management, registrants in the PIA can change their coded IDs every 20 days.

These features are available only for U.S.-registered aircraft operating in U.S. airspace and that have 1090 ADS-B equipment.

"We're pleased the FAA has responded positively to ADS-B privacy concerns of operators, which NBAA has raised in numerous government/industry forums, including with the NextGen Advisory Committee," said NBAA President and CEO Ed Bolen. "Until now, the lack of a privacy solution has been a disincentive for some operators to equip with ADS-B. No one should have to surrender their privacy and security just because they board an airplane."

Heidi Williams, NBAA's director of air traffic services and infrastructure, said, "Retaining privacy after equipping with ADS-B Out ensures that the aircraft isn't transmitting information that can be tracked back to the registry. This will encourage those operators that have not already equipped their aircraft with ADS-B to do so, which will help expedite aircraft handling as part of the FAA's Next-Generation (NextGen) air traffic management system."

An "anonymous" mode is available for aircraft using the 978 UAT form of ADS-B Out but only when not squawking a discreet transponder code and the installed hardware supports it.
